Qilin Publishing, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In spite of its glorious long history, China, at the start of the twentieth century faced a major crisis. Its economy was stagnant, foreign powers had usurped its territory, and internal rebellions threatened its stability. Among the Chinese elites there were many competing ideas and as many courses of action on how to survive as a sovereign nation and change its path in history. This is the story of Wang Boqun, and his younger brother, Wang Dilun, in their quest for a republican China; it is about their journey from a relatively lesser warlord family in one of the poorest provinces at the beginning of a remarkable period of transition of China. It relates how they channeled their upbringing, education, and experiences into contributions and sacrifices for their belief that China could overcome the foreign colonization, internal power struggles, long lasting prejudices, and find a path toward its rightful place in the new world order. This is also the story of two families, the Liu and the Wang, who were joined together by marriage and alliance for several generations. The Wang brothers mother is the elder sister of Liu Xianshi, the head of the Liu family and the warlord of Guizhou. Liu recognized the potential of the Wang brothers early on and groomed them for key positions in his government. In the chaotic aftermath after the successful republican revolution of 1912, a fissure developed between uncle and nephews. The subsequent events lead to Liu s downfall from power and the assassination of Wang Dilun in 1921. This family struggle was one of many such political and military conflicts in the attempt to unify China as a republic,...
