By Therese J. Borchard

Paulist Press International, U.S., United States, 2000. Paperback. Condition: New. Wendy Van Ne, Wendy VanNest (illustrator). Language: English . Brand New Book. Whitney would do anything to get to soccer practice, even copy a friend's homework so she won't have to waste time on boring Math herself. But what was supposed to be a one-time solution becomes a habit. Copying homework leads to copying a quiz - and getting caught. The teacher's demand for a confession on who was cheating from whom puts the girls friendship on the line. Whitney turns to Nana's Emerald Bible for help and gets sent back in time to King Solomon's court. The uncanny wisdom of Solomon and the wisdom of the strange foreign girl are tested when two women come to the king, both claiming to be mother of the same child. Whitney offers a solution to Solomon, who in turn helps her solve her own situation and at last make things right with both her friend and her teacher.
